Beechwood's Lebanese cemetery was the first section to be considered a community cemetery

STEPHEN THORNE

In 1994, Beechwood Funeral, Cemetery and Cremation Services had a seminal meeting with a monsignor from St. Charbel Maronite Church in Ottawa.

They didn't know it at the time, but the agreement between Beechwood Cemetery and Msgr. Raymond Hanna to set aside a portion of Beechwood's 160 acres for members of the Lebanese-Canadian parish would set a kind of template for the expansion and growth of what would become Canada's national cemetery.

"The idea of creating something specific to what their burial needs would be really was the beginning of our effort to build cemeteries specific to a faith's or community's burial needs," explains James Patterson, Beechwood's director of family services.

Two hundred lots were set aside for the exclusive use of the St. Charbel parish, the first section within Beechwood to be considered a community cemetery.

With immigration from Lebanon accelerating, 200 more lots were set aside in 2003 for parishioners of St. Elias Antiochian Orthodox Cathedral and another 200 for the parish of Saints Peter and Paul Melkite Catholic Church.

As Canada has grown and diversified, so has Beechwood Funeral, Cemetery and Cremation Services.

Inaccurately regarded as Ottawa's Anglo-Protestant cemetery, Beechwood has always reflected Canada's identity as a multicultural, multi-faith society. It always took in whoever needed its services and did its best to accommodate a diversity of people of many faiths, languages, cultures and social standing.

Besides Lebanese, Beechwood has sections specifically designed for the Chinese, Egyptian, Greek, Latvian, Muslim, Polish, Portuguese, Ukrainian and Vietnamese communities. Staff speak more than just English and French, including Arabic, Cantonese, Mandarin, Toisan and Chiuchao. Other translators can be arranged.

The Sacred Space is a multi-functional facility conceived after extensive consultations with local religious leaders and the Ontario Multi-faith Council.

Patterson says the arrangements made with Msgr. Hanna "goes to the heart of what we are. We are the National Cemetery of Canada now. Had we not brought in all these different churches and communities, it would never have happened.

"They are absolutely essential to the reason why we were named the National Cemetery of Canada in 2007. It shows the cultural mosaic of Canada."

Like other sections at Beechwood, the Lebanese-Canadian cemeteries have their own icon reflecting the beliefs of those who are buried around it — a statue of the Maronite monk and priest, Saint Charbel Makhlof.

The Lebanese graves and those of other Canadians who came from far-off lands reflect not only Beechwood's growth, but the country's.

Top 5 Reasons to Preplan Your Funeral

1. You want to ease the burden on your family and loved ones.

- If your wishes are unknown when you die, they will be faced with making difficult decisions at a trying time. Will they know if you wish to be buried or cremated? Will they agree on an open or closed casket? Will they agree on how much to spend? Confusion and disagreements are common occurrences when there is no plan to follow. You can avoid this by leaving behind a plan.

2. You want your family to have the benefit of a meaningful funeral.

- A funeral is an important event for a grieving family. Psychologically, it provides a sense of closure and enables the family to begin the healing process. Families benefit emotionally and socially by honouring the lives of their loved ones with a fitting ceremony and by giving them a proper send off. It is difficult to make the funeral the best it can be when planning it in a short time.

3. You want your final wishes to be followed.

- If you have specific preferences for the disposition of your remains and the nature of your funeral services, you can clearly express them in your funeral plan. You may have a preference for burial or cremation, the epitaph on your headstone, or the music and readings at your funeral. Or you may not want a funeral ceremony. Whatever your wishes, they need to be set forth in your funeral plan.

4. You want to be self-reliant and have your affairs in order at the end of your life.

- Taking care of your funeral arrangements is a thoughtful and caring thing to do for your family. It is comforting to know that you have done all you can do to ease their burden. And you can be assured that they will appreciate that your caring for them continued after you are gone.

5. You want to assume the financial responsibility for your funeral.

- Planning ahead allows you to make financial arrangements to cover your funeral costs. Even if you are leaving behind sufficient money, will your survivors be able to access it? Preplanning provides you with sound financial planning options you can consider ahead of time.
